Location:

The Ship Inn is situated in the village of Portloe, within the Veryan parish and the well-regarded Roseland peninsula, which includes the harbour village of St Mawes. The peninsula is almost equidistant between the City of Truro and town of St Austell. The surrounding area is mostly residential and agricultural; the village has a church and another licenced venue, The Lugger. Truro is around 14 miles northwest. The Roseland peninsula is a sought after location to both live and visit.

Description:

The Ship Inn forms the end of a terrace of similar aged properties on the road leading from the harbour through the village and toward Veryan. The property is mostly over two floors with a single storey on the Western elevation which contains the customer toilets. Stone construction under a pitched tile roof with wooden fenestrations.

The property comprises ground floor public bar and dining area providing for 40 internal covers. Commercial kitchen, washroom and prep, ground floor beer cellar and store to rear of bar. First floor provides for a double occupancy letting room with shower en suite plus two bedroom suite with separate bathroom. Private accommodation unseen but described as lounge, bedroom, shower room WC and utility room. Additional storeroom and former WC.

Externally the building has a customer car park (9) plus 3 additional spaces and stone built garage/store on the Western boundary. Accessed over the public highway is a customer beer garden with covered seating area (8) and sloping lawned garden bordered by a stream and providing space for c50 covers. Overall site size 0.269 acres. Building footprint c1400 sft.
